skip stones properly (it's all in the wrist). By the time we reached the nursery I had almost forgotten why I was there. So, when the guy at the nursery couldn't track my flowers, I wasn't that disappointed.

We took a charming water ferry back and watched dolphins frolic in the ocean. As the sun caught the crystal water glinting on their backs, I was overcome by a wonderful, indescribable sensation. I felt as if I had suddenly relaxed enough to accept any possibility – even love.

We walked along the beach at dusk. The sky looked like an artist's palette, all the blues were mixing with purple and seeping into the red. It was glorious.
